Summary

Creator: Murphy, Frederick D., 1940-1993

Title: Frederick D. Murphy papers

Date: 1970-1992 [bulk 1970-1980]

Size: 7.42 linear feet (8 boxes)

Source: Gift of Sandra Murphy on behalf of the Murphy Family, 1998.

Abstract: The Frederick D. Murphy papers consist principally of press kits and news clippings that Murphy collected on hundreds of recording artists of popular music (primarily rhythm and blues, soul, disco, rock and roll, and other genres) and executives in the music industry. The bulk of the collection consists of these files and material on organizations that Murphy represented, primarily record companies and related music associations, including the Black Music Association. The years for most of the collection span the 1970s and 1980s.

Creator History

Frederick D. Murphy was an African American publicist for Black recording artists in the 1970s and 1980s. As the sole proprietor of Frederick D. Murphy Communications, Inc. in New York, he was the public relations consultant for such clients as Nick Ashford and Valerie Simpson, Miles Davis, Roberta

Flack, Patti LaBelle, Melba Moore, and actress/models Toukie Smith and Beverly Johnson.

Murphy was a columnist for entertainment oriented newspapers and magazines. He was a music critic and feature writer for the weekly industry newspaper Variety, covering special music events and conferences. His columns "Jam Session" and "Discotrax" focused on the Black music market, specifically, recording artists, concerts, and cabarets. In this capacity, he interviewed scores of actors, entertainers, and behind-the-scenes personalities such as Roberta Flack, Melba Moore, and Naomi Sims. Murphy also wrote the monthly column "Inside the Big Apple" for Black Stars, a black consumer oriented publication that deals principally with blacks in the entertainment industry. His column described the activities of personalities in the entertainment field as they passed through the metropolitan New York area.
